

BLUEGRASS
INSTITUTE
FOR PUBLIC POLICY
SOLUTIONS

For Immediate Release
Friday, Dec. 5, 2008

Contact: Jim Waters
270-782-2140

Bluegrass Audio: Radio commentaries promote liberty on KNN

(LOUISVILLE, Ky.) — The Bluegrass Institute and the Kentucky News Network have joined to make “Bluegrass Audio,” a weekly 90-second radio commentary on the virtues of liberty, available to radio stations throughout the commonwealth.

Today’s commentary – the first in the “Bluegrass Audio” series – addresses the question: “Where does liberty come from?”

“The Kentucky News Network is pleased to provide new audio content for our more than 90 affiliates statewide,” said Nathan Butler, KNN’s director of operations. “The commentaries from the Bluegrass Institute will allow stations who air the program a new feature with timely content, opinions and stories, while at the same time creating a portal for listener response.”

The audio commentaries will be made available to the 99 KNN stations on the network’s Web site for affiliates and are being produced at KNN affiliate WKCT-AM in Bowling Green. A version allowing stations to imbed a commercial or promotional announcement will be included. Scripts of each broadcast also will be available for radio stations to post on Web sites.

In “Where does liberty come from,” listeners will hear Jim Waters, the institute’s director of policy and communications, offer this perspective: “The secret of the greatness of our founders was that they recognized themselves as the guardians, not givers, of liberty.”

Waters puts his extensive experience as a radio news anchor and talk show host to work as the voice of the Bluegrass Audio.

“The Bluegrass Institute is pleased to present a new audio perspective to the Kentucky News Network,” said Chris Derry, the institute’s founder and president. “With Jim at the mic, this new series will embolden those listeners who want Kentucky to become a more prosperous place to live and work.”

For comment, contact the Bluegrass Institute at (270) 782-2140 or jwaters@freedomkentucky.org.

Bluegrass Institute for Public Policy Solutions
400 E. Main Ave, Suite 306
Bowling Green, KY 42102
www.bipps.org